Egyptian American imprisoned in Egypt for 3 years lands in U.S. after Trump intervention

Aya Hijazi, a U.S. citizen and charity worker, was incarcerated without trial on charges that were widely derided. President Trump and his aides worked for weeks with Egyptian President Abdel Fatah al-Sissi to secure freedom for Hijazi, her husband and four other humanitarian workers.

If 'Fearless Girl' symbolizes women's rights, what happens to artists' rights?

The creator of Wall Street's famous "Charging Bull," who donated the sculpture after the 1987 stock market crash, is threatening to sue over the placement of a statue of a little girl, which he says turns his work into a symbol of male chauvinism and which was commissioned as part of an advertising campaign for one of the world's biggest banks.

Berkeley, known as a bastion of free speech and now a political battleground, reverses decision to cancel Ann Coulter appearance

The back-and-forth about the conservative pundit's planned speech comes after repeated violent outbursts on campus since President Trump's election, which forced the university to weigh the values of free expression that it has championed against safety concerns.

By Perry Stein and William Wan

- Berkeley gave birth to the Free Speech Movement in the '60s. Now, conservatives demand it include them.

Jeff Sessions doesn't think a judge in Hawaii — a.k.a. 'an island in the Pacific' — should overrule Trump

In his criticism of the judge who struck down President Trump's travel ban, the attorney general stumbles into a factual minefield: Hawaii is a state and has been since 1959, and Derrick Watson isn't a Hawaiian judge — he's a federal judge who serves on a district court in Hawaii.

Court again finds intentional voter discrimination in Texas

The latest ruling means Texas's strict voter ID law, congressional maps and state legislative maps — all of which were enacted in 2011 — have recently been found in violation of federal law. The rulings carry the risk of a court punishing the state by demanding approval before changing voting laws.

Pulitzer Prize-winning reporting: Uncovering Trump

In February 2016, presidential candidate Donald Trump promised $6 million in donations, including $1 million from his own pocket, to charities along his campaign trail. But by the time he won the New Hampshire primary, he had stopped giving away money and had donated far less than his pledged amount. Post reporter David A. Fahrenthold went in search of the missing money and found a bigger story than he ever expected.
