Trump calls Turkey's Erdogan to congratulate him on contested vote

According to Turkish officials, President Trump's comments differed in tone from those of the State Department, which urged Turkey to respect the rights of its citizens and noted election irregularities observed during the referendum. The two leaders also agreed that Syria's president should be held accountable for his actions, a Turkish statement said.

Facebook wanted 'visceral' live video. It's getting live-streaming killers and suicides.

The latest shocking example of the live-video service's dark side came over the weekend when a man broadcast video of him fatally shooting a bystander in Cleveland. The incident sparked a new round of questions about whether the social network should do more to prevent violent videos from reaching millions of people.
